Program at SPC to showcase latest technology in live sound equipment

LEVELLAND – South Plains College will be the site of a daylong exhibit of the latest products in the live sound technology industry in a program presented by JBL, manufacturer of car and home audio and professional sound systems.

Sponsored by JBL and Dobbs Stanford, the products will be available from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday (April 30) in the Tom T. Hall Production Studio and the Sound Lab in the Commercial Music building. Local production company Miller Pro Audio supplemented the equipment for the event.

Students attending the event will have an opportunity to observe and experience new products as well as network with sound industry professionals who also will be attending the event. Representatives from Dobbs Stanford will be on hand to answer questions and conduct demonstrations as needed.

For more information, contact Matt Quick, instructor in sound technology/sound equipment, at (806) 716-2472.
